ABSTRACT: In this paper, we describe and analyze different models for mortality from acute myocardial infarction for each municipality of São Paulo, for the years 2006 to 2010. To model the temporal count data, we consider the use of Bayesian procedures for estimate the relative risk as an efficient way to get the inferences of interest.

KEYWORDS: Temporal models; mortality, myocardial infarction, Bayesian methods